FATHER DIES: Grim discovery in Church End pond shatters family

Bereaved brother's tribute to dead man

By Alasdair Hooper
alasdair.hooper@essexlive.news

HEARTBROKEN relatives of a man who was found dead in a Harlow pond have paid tribute to the "funny and loving" father-of-two.

Essex Police were called to Church End at around 10.30am on Saturday (February 10) following reports of a man's body in a pond.

The man was found dead at the scene in the residential area outside Harlow town centre and the incident is not being treated as suspicious by police.

It later emerged that the man who had lost his life was 26-year-old Billy Mitchell, a father of two young boys who left behind a devastated family coming to terms with his sudden loss.

"Billy was a kind, funny and loving man that would do anything for anyone," said his brother, Matthew Bengie.

Devoted

"He was a devoted father to two little boys and would move mountains to make sure they were happy."

"He dedicated his whole life to his boys, family and friends."

"Billy touched a lot of people's hearts."

"There won't be a day that goes by that we won't think of you Billy"

Matthew Bengie

"And this has devastated the family and his friends."

"No words can describe how much he'll be missed."

"And nothing will ever fill the void that has hit our lives."

"There won't be a day that goes by that we won't think of you Billy - you'll always be my little brother, we love you."

The incident at the weekend happened in a pond situated in the middle of a wooded area between the homes on Church End and Katherine's Way - a main road into Harlow.

A neighbour said the path through the woodland is often used by local residents in the area as a shortcut through to the road.

"There's a path through there and you can walk around the pond

Billy Mitchell, who tragically died on Saturday, was a devoted dad. (Inset, right and above) Police work at the scene of Mr Mitchell's death and go all the way through to the main road at the back."

"People always use it as a shortcut," she explained.

Pictures taken at the scene showed the police cordon in place.

RESIDENTS at a block of flats in Harlow rescued two children after their flat caught fire following a suspected arson attack.

Two fire crews attended the blaze in The Chantry after it took hold on the walkway of a first floor flat at around 11.40am on Wednesday, February 7.

Firefighters arrived on the scene to find that neighbours had already helped the children down.

They then rescued a woman from the first floor after pitching a ladder.

The woman and children have been taken to hospital as a precautionary measure.

One witness said: "I just came home from work and it was quite unnerving to see."

External

A spokesperson for Essex County Fire and Rescue Service said: "Firefighters rescued a woman from a first floor flat after a fire broke out on the external walkway to the property."

"When firefighters arrived they found two children had already been rescued by neighbours who had helped them down from the first floor. "Firefighters pitched a ladder to rescue a woman."

"Fire crews quickly extinguished the fire and checked the property to ensure there was no smoke or fire spread."

"The fire did not affect the inside of the property. "Firefighters left the scene at 12:20pm in the care of the Police who are investigating the fire."

Essex Police assisted fire crews as they set up a cordon.

■ Witnesses or anyone with information about the incident are asked to call Harlow police station on 101, quoting reference 335.

Harvey Centre's food quarter is days from launch

THE HARVEY Centre will be launching its food quarter called The Terrace on Saturday (February 17) and a day of free entertainment and great deals is lined up to mark the occasion.

Batman, Wonder Woman, Superman and Supergirl will be roaming the centre and skaters will be gliding around the malls handing out vouchers to shoppers.

There will be a free photo booth situated in The Terrace, where visitors are encouraged to get into the spirit of the event and dress-up with food inspired props.

Restaurants will be providing additional entertainment on the day.

Sticky Sisters will have balloons and Mini Eggs for the kids and there will be a sample table outside the restaurant.

There will also be lots of discounts at Sticky Sisters including 15 per cent off plus kids can eat for free.

Subway will be offering discount and meal deal vouchers, Burger Priest will be handing out £5 meal deal flyers and there will be food to sample outside their restaurant.

Burger King will be offering free ice cream samples, dress-up crowns and colouring books to shoppers and Kung Fu The Real China Oriental Buffet will be offering a 10 per cent discount.

Cineworld will be offering £1 off on popcorn when purchasing tickets.

Centre manager Bryan Young said: "This is a really exciting time for Harlow. In the past we've had a fairly limited night time leisure offer in the town and our goal was to change this and respond to residents' demands."

"Thanks to The Terrace, Harlow is becoming a bustling town once again, where people want to come after work with friends and family to eat and drink in a family friendly restaurants before checking out the latest blockbuster at Cineworld."

The event runs from noon until 6pm.

PREMIER OUT OF FAVOUR: Developers are falling foul Plans for budget hotel near school branded foolish

Paul Slater is opposing plans to build a Premier Inn next to Church Langley Community Primary

By Richard Duggan
richard.duggan@essexlive.news

PLANS to build a three-storey budget hotel next to a primary school have been condemned by furious residents.

The application to erect a 46-bedroom Premier Inn in Church Langley was submitted by developers to Harlow Council at the end of January.

But locals have already voiced their opposition to the proposals which have been branded as "inappropriate" and "incompatible" with the area and may pose a risk to young children.

The construction management plan for the hotel, which is intended to be built in Church Langley Way, is estimated to take 24 weeks.

If given the go-ahead, the development would open next to Church Langley Community Primary School and the Potters Arms public house.

In addition to the building itself, the plan includes landscaping, a re-positioning of the car park entrance and will require the re-alignment of the neighbouring school's waiting area.

Paul Slater, 39, is just one of the residents who plans to oppose the application to the bitter end.

"I don't think there's any reason to have it there," he said.

"There's plenty of other space around Harlow to have it - it's in the wrong area, a residential area right next to a school."

"We have enough traffic problems in Church Langley, it's disgusting."

Motor mechanic Paul, of Malkin Drive, is also annoyed he did not receive a letter informing him of the plans. A planning consultation letter was sent by Harlow Council to residents who live close to the site on February 7.

It invited locals to submit their comments on the application by February 28, with any representations needing to be made in writing.

In addition, Paul believes that people who live closer to the site will be kept up by late-night noise from traffic.

"I'm just angry that they're doing it - they are encroaching on the residential area. There's no

Battered chocolate eggs are proving popular

Battered Creme Eggs going down a storm with chippy's hungry regulars

A FISH and chip shop is getting into the Easter spirit early this year - but their efforts to celebrate the festivities might divide opinion.

The family-owned Nazeing Fish and Chip Shop has added a new delicacy to its menu ahead of the Easter season - battered Cadbury creme eggs.

And apparently the unusual snack, which takes the popular slogan 'how do you eat yours?' to a whole new level, is going down a treat with customers.

Owner Luigi Forgione - who admits he hasn't tried one himself yet - said: "We already do battered mars bars and snickers and it's coming up to Easter so I thought we'd give creme eggs a go."

"It's going really well, everyone's trying it. Some people turn their nose up at it but others are keen. I think we sold 10 or 15 on the first day."

"Someone called up to tell me it was really nice."

"The creamy yolk in the middle melts when you cut into it so it lends itself really well to battering."

The goodies are also on offer at Captain's Fish and Chips in Hoddesdon, which is owned by Tony Forgione.

Brothers Luigi, Libby and Tony are third-generation fish and chip shop proprietors, and have built themselves a mini-empire in Hertfordshire and East Essex over the decades.

What do you think of their latest venture?

of parents who are against move to build yards from community primary school

The site may become home to a Premier Inn and (inset) Michelle Parker, Richard Doyle, Sandra Doyle and Karen Bruce are all opposed to the plans

The hotel could be opened next to Church Langley Community Primary School worse if planning permission is granted.

He is not the only parent who fears the hotel could be used as somewhere to watch schoolchildren.

Sandra Doyle, 46, is worried about the hotel looking onto the school's front and how traffic will affect the local roads.

"It's just too close to the school," said Sandra, who lives in Church Langley and has one child at the school.

"It's just going to cause chaos when it's built, more traffic coming in and out and it's not part of the local community."

"Who's going to be using it? It's going to be people using the business centre - it's not for us and it's not for the local community."

In response to the opposition, a spokesman for Harlow Council said: "A planning application for the construction of a 46-bedroom hotel has been submitted to the council for consideration. No decision on the planning application has been made yet as we are currently carrying out public consultation."

"Comments and views on the application can be made to us up until the end of February. All comments will be considered by us before a decision is made."

A decision on the application is expected by the end of April.

This is not the first time an application has been made by Premier Inn to build on the land, with an initial plan submitted in 2016 being withdrawn to address concerns raised.

A spokesman for Premier Inn told the Star their plans stem from a need to meet increasing demand in the area.

"Church Langley is an exciting location for us to invest in and, as well as offering visitors greater choice and value, the new hotel will bring fresh investment and 12 new jobs to the local area," the spokesman added.

"We're aware of some of the concerns raised about highways and the site's boundary with Church Langley Primary School."

"We've specifically been working with our design team and the council to refine our early designs and address these points. The new designs take on that earlier feedback and we have implemented recommendations made by Harlow Council. We want to make a positive difference by investing into Church Langley and Harlow as a whole and we look forward to the Council's decision."

added value for anyone local. I can't see what benefits they're planning."

Paul also feels that the number of hotel rooms is a sign of how many additional vehicles will then be using the local roads.

He added that the derelict land would be better used to benefit the adjacent primary school.

Gary Brownjohn, 50, has two children who attend the primary school and has written to the council to state his objections.

His main reason for opposing the application is potential safeguarding issues with a hotel being built next door to the school.

"It could be a meeting point for people who like to look at children," he explained.

"The way the plan is, it looks like the windows could face towards the side of the school."

Gary, who lives in Tickenhall Drive, also feels the traffic situation in the area will only be made

Welfare concerns as 57-year-old is pictured crying after his home was towed away

Council admits it seized caravan

By Sophie Finnegan
sophie.finnegan@essexlive.news

ESSEX County Council has admitted seizing a Harlow man's caravan, making him and his two dogs homeless.

John Jones, who is 57 years old, lived in the caravan along with his dogs in the Fern Hill area of Harlow.

A picture of the 57-year old surfaced online showing the man sobbing on an empty site along with his two dogs after the council removed his caravan last Friday (February 9).

In the wake of the distressing image, an online petition was set up to try and get Mr Jones his caravan back.

The council previously denied having any involvement with the removal of the caravan.

An Essex County Council spokesperson said initially: "We have no record of removing a caravan from land near Commons Road in Harlow and having heard about it we are concerned about the welfare of John Jones and will be liaising with local agencies to see what help can be offered."

But the council has since admitted removing Mr Jones' caravan and issued a court order.

Illegal

In an updated statement, Essex County Council admit: "We posted notices regarding an illegal encampment on the roadside in Fernhill Lane, Harlow, after we received several complaints from residents."

"We had previously offered Mr Jones a pitch at the local Essex Countywide Traveller Unit caravan site nearby, which he declined."

"Last month we visited him to

John Jones, 57, was pictured crying along with his two dogs conduct welfare and human rights checks. In these cases, a court summons is a last resort.

"When Mr Jones did not attend his court hearing, we gave him an additional 24 hours to respond and then a further 48 hours to leave."

"When this time elapsed, his caravan was placed into secure storage and he was given the details of Harlow Council's housing team for ongoing help and support."

"We understand Harlow Council has been in touch with Mr Jones to offer housing support and our Homelessness Mentors scheme has also been contacted to offer help to Mr Jones."

Relocation

Mr Jones has now been offered another caravan site by the council, but he has since "refused" this offer of relocation.

The online petition now has over 17,000 signatures with residents calling on the council to help Mr Jones during the cold weather.

WHAT THE COUNCIL SAID

A HARLOW Council spokesman said: "We are aware of local people's concerns about the welfare of a man who has been living in a caravan on land in Harlow. These concerns are being shared on social media and through an online petition."

"We have not removed or had any involvement in the removal of his caravan. The land is owned by Essex County Council. We are making enquiries with them about what has happened to the caravan and if any support is being provided to the gentleman."

"We work with local organisations to connect anyone who is homeless with local services and help. This includes us providing housing support and advice to those who need and want help."

Drink driver sent to jail for causing high-speed crash

Victim lost an eye and spent a month in hospital

By Hannah Kane

hannah.kane@essexlive.news

A LATVIAN motorist has been jailed for causing a crash in Harlow that left a man blind in one eye.

Janis Krumings, 25, from Harlow, was driving his Volvo along Fifth Avenue at double the speed limit when he clipped a curb and collided with a Ford Focus on March 1, 2017.

He had been out that night celebrating his birthday with some friends when he drove at 80mph in a 40mph zone.

The driver of the Focus, 54-year-old care assistant Robert Bell, spent over 26 days in hospital with injuries so serious that he still requires further surgery.

Scientist

Prosecuting, Charlotte Davison QC, said: "David Hague, a forensic scientist and expert witness, explains that Mr Krumings was driving a Volvo along Fifth Avenue, a road that has a speed limit of 40mph.

"He had a front seat passenger. He lost control of his vehicle and was in a collision with Mr Bell's Ford Focus.

"The Volvo travelled sideways along the road and the nearside of the vehicle struck the front of the Ford.

"The expert found it was possible to match the tyre marks using a simulator speed at 80 mph, exactly double the speed limit."

Krumings was arrested at the scene, but taken to Princess Alexandra Hospital. A blood sample was taken three hours after the incident, which found him to have 129 milligrams of alcohol in his blood. The legal limit is 80mg.

Mr Bell was transferred from the Harlow hospital to Adden-

The aftermath of the collision in Harlow

brooke's in Cambridge, suffering rib fractures and facial lacerations, as well losing the sight in his right eye.

He also suffered fractures in his arms, and still requires further surgery on one of them.

The 54-year-old victim also struggles with memory loss, anxiety and depression.

Defending, Evelyn Hicks QC said: "This is a young man. He is a Latvian national. He remembers little of the incident himself. He remembers working extremely hard that day.

"He remembers driving to his friends and walking to the Wetherspoons, having some drinks.

"He does not know to this day why he decided to drive that evening. He cannot remember the journey. He does not know why he was on that road."

Krumings pleaded guilty to causing serious injury by dangerous alcohol and excessive alcohol.

"He eats and sleeps this case and will also do so for the rest of his days," said Ms Hicks. "He is ashamed of what he did.

"He has been in the UK for a number of years and he sends money home to his girlfriend and family in Latvia. His remorse is genuine."

Judge Emma Peters QC sentenced Krumings to two years imprisonment last Friday (February 9) at Chelmsford Crown Court.

She said: "You are a hard working, good man who sends money home to your family in Latvia.

"But you are also a man who on this night, got in a car when you were one-and-a-half times over the limit and then went and drove at a speed that was twice the speed limit.

"Cars are dangerous things and when you get in a car one-and-a-half times over the limit and then drive twice over the speed limit you put yourself and other road users at risk.

"In some ways, the best thing to be said is at least Mr Bell did not die. But he was blamelessly driving home that night.

"He was also a hard-working man. His injuries are numerous and he has lost an eye."

Krumings was also sentenced to one month imprisonment for excessive alcohol, to be served concurrently, and also faces a three-year driving ban.

Veterinary surgery is supporting Winter Walkies event again

EPPING Forest-based Forest Vets are helping their local hospice by sponsoring St Clare's dog-friendly fundraising event for the fifth year in a row.

Forest Vets, who have a veterinary hospital on Hemnall Street in Epping and two other surgeries in Harlow and Woodford Bridge, are sponsoring St Clare Hospice's Winter Walkies on Sunday, February 25, at the hospice in Hastingwood Road, Hastingwood. (11am start).

Forest Vets first sponsored the 5km dog walk event in 2014 and their support means that all money raised at the event goes directly to fund the care and support the hospice provides for free across West Essex and East Herts.

The 2017 Winter Walkies event raised in excess of £5,000 and over 350 dog walkers and their four-legged friends took part.

The fundraising team is hoping to better this amount at the 2018 event.

Practice

Debbie White, Forest Vets practice manager, has been leading the practice's fundraising efforts since she joined the surgery nine years ago.

She said: "At Forest Vets we help a lot of animal charities, like Guide Dogs for the Blind and Cats Protection, as well as St Clare Hospice, and I think it is really good for businesses to support their local charities.

"I haven't personally needed the support of St Clare, but you just never know when you will need the help of a hospice.

"I have known of many local people who have been cared for by St Clare, and as a local vet, it is really important to us to support our local charities that are making a difference in our community.

"The care St Clare Hospice provides is second to none, and I have been lucky enough to come and visit the hospice centre and to see the facilities.

"The expansion of the care the hospice provides to people in the community, caring for people in their own homes, is absolutely amazing.

"It is so important that our local GPs and hospitals are aware of the services on offer from St Clare so that more people are referred and benefit from St Clare's first class care."

About the event, she said: "Winter Walkies is practically tailor made for Forest Vets, being such a fantastic doggie event.

"I have attended Winter Walkies for the past four years and it's a lovely event - come rain or shine - with some being warmer, or more muddy, than others.

"It is great to see the dogs out having fun, instead of coming into the vets feeling poorly.

"Every year you see dogs of all shapes and sizes - and some are even in fancy dress which is always entertaining.

"I will never forget a chihuahua I saw dressed up in little booties.

"I will definitely be there again on the day - ready to see all the dogs and have a great day together."

Registration costs £10 for adults and £5 for children, which includes a free soup, dog rosette and certificates for children.

Lamarr Chambers was arrested in Ladyshot for failing to stop for police and possession with intent to supply class A drugs

Long wait goes on for man in custody

British record set by arrested suspected drug dealer

By Alasdair Hooper
alsadair.hooper@essexlive.news

A SUSPECTED drug dealer broke the British record on Saturday (February 10) for spending the most days in custody while police wait for him to poo.

Lamarr Chambers, 24, was arrested by police on Wednesday, January 17, for failing to stop in Ladyshot, Harlow, along with intent to supply class A drugs.

He has been held in custody since his arrest as the police wait until he poos out the drugs he is believed to have swallowed.

Essex Police said there was "no update" on the 24-year-old suspected gang member as he entered the 23rd day held under constant supervision.

Medical experts say there is a small chance of his bowels bursting but a force spokesman today refused to provide "blow by blow" daily updates.

They say there won't be an update on his condition "until he has done what we need him to do".

Following Chambers' arrest, policing team Operation Raptor West tweeted to say: "London gang nominal arrested for failing to stop for police and possession with intent to supply class A drugs, male doesn't think we have the power to keep him until he removes said items from his bottom."

But more than three weeks later, the team based at Harlow police station, Essex, are still waiting.

They took to Twitter again earlier this week to say: "Day 20 is coming to an end and still no movement, sorry for the delay in updates the team are busy covering this and other ongoing investigations".

Operation Raptor West is Essex Police's gang and urban street crime unit for Harlow, Epping Forest, Brentwood and Thurrock districts.

Tests

Chambers is undergoing daily medical tests but research shows that holding your poo for a significant amount of time might not be as bad as you think.

Trish Macnair, from the Primary Care Society for Gastroenterology, said: "There's only so long you can hang on."

"You won't get a devastating build-up of toxins that can poison the body in such a short space of time."

"You're just going to get a lot of uncomfortable stretching of intestinal tubes."

"This is an acute situation, not chronic."

"Ultimately, things will move through the bowel and it'll empty itself. Most people have been there."

She explains the longer you go without excreting the more uncomfortable it is going to be.

She added: "The suspect will feel his bowel moving, trying to empty. He'll be holding his sphincter tight."

Officers have claimed the 24-year-old is also refusing to eat, but Ms Macnair has explained that fasting will not prevent the suspect from doing what is natural.

She said: "Even if you're not eating, the bowel will still move."

"That's because only about a third of what you find in faeces is food debris."

"A lot of it is dead, friendly bacteria and the lining of the bowel which is constantly shedding, like skin. Plus, lots of fluid."

Ms McNair went to explain that there is a small risk of the bowel swelling and bursting but in a young, healthy person, you'd expect the bowel to empty itself before that happened.

She added: "I'm amazed he's held on for so long."

"It's only a matter of time."

Women are urged to join run in aid of cancer charity

By Charlotte Page

charlotte.page@hertssexnews.co.uk

HARLOW women are being invited to kick-start the New Year by signing up to Cancer Research UK's Race for Life.

Every day, 90 people are diagnosed with cancer in the East of England.

That's why the charity is urging women of all shapes, sizes, ages and abilities to enter the Race for Life 5k or 10k events at Harlow Town Park on Sunday, May 13.

By signing up to Race for Life, women in Harlow will make a real difference in the fight against cancer.

Money raised will help Cancer Research UK scientists find new ways to prevent, diagnose and treat the disease, helping save more lives.

As well as the Harlow events, there will be a Race for Life 5k, 10k and Half Marathon taking place at Lee Valley Park on Sunday, October 7.

Perfect

Courtney Culverhouse, Cancer Research UK's event manager, said: "This is the perfect time for women in Harlow to commit to getting a little more active in 2018 by signing up for a Race for Life and taking on a new fitness challenge.

"For those who need some extra encouragement to get moving, Race for Life offers the ultimate motivation.

"That's because by taking part and raising money, participants will be helping to fund vital cancer research.

"It's time to mark the New Year and make a resolution to remember.

By joining like-minded women committed to the cause, local women can unite against a disease that affects us all in some way."

Courtney added: "Taking part in Race for Life is a hugely moving experience. It's a special opportunity for people to come together to remember loved ones lost to cancer or celebrate the lives of those dear to them who have survived."

One in two people in the UK will be diagnosed with cancer at some stage in their lives, but the good news is more people are surviving the disease now than ever before. Cancer survival in the UK has doubled since the early 1970s and Cancer Research UK's work has been at the heart of that progress.

Cancer Research UK's Race for Life, in partnership with Tesco, is an inspiring women-only series of 5k, 10k, pretty muddy, half marathon and hiking events which raise millions of pounds every year to help beat cancer sooner by funding crucial research.

Cancer Research UK's life-saving work relies on the public's support.

Thanks to the generosity of its supporters, the charity was able to spend over £35 million last year in the South East on some of the UK's leading scientific and clinical research, helping more men, women and children survive.

Courtney continued: "Race for Life events are non-competitive and participants can choose to walk, jog or run around the course.

"Whether they plan to pound the pavements or stroll to the finish, every step women take will help to support life-saving research."

Dr Aine McCarthy, Cancer Research UK's senior science communications officer, said: "Signing up to Cancer Research UK's Race for Life is a great opportunity for women looking to kick-start a healthier lifestyle.

"Being regularly active has long-term health benefits, as research shows that even moderate physical activity can help reduce the risk of cancer.

"Brisk walking counts – anything that gets you warm and a little out of breath.

"By taking part and raising money, women in Harlow will also be supporting our scientists and researchers to make vital

I am proud of what we achieved

AS you will know, I resigned as leader of Harlow Council and as a councillor in January. You can read the reasons why on my blog (www.clempner.com).

I am proud of what the council achieved when I was leader. Dealing decisively with the traveller issue, getting the street lights turned back on, the refurbishment of Oakwood Pond, supporting Public Health England's move of the National Science Hub to Harlow, and creating HTS with plans to significantly improve the look and feel of the town, amongst many other things, while coping with massive government cuts to funding, have all been driven by my love of the town I am proud to call home.

I would like to thank the residents of Little Parndon and Hare Street for electing me to represent you on the council in 2012, and again in 2016, and for the very many messages of support since I stepped down. Many people have asked me to consider standing as an independent, but while I wouldn't completely rule it out at some point in the future, unless circumstances change I don't intend to seek election either to the council or to Parliament any time soon.

While I won't be involved in party politics, I will continue to contribute in other ways, joining the board of trustees of a couple of local charities, supporting civic and artistic events, and fighting for the investment our wonderful town deserves.

Harlow continues to have

Help to get John his home back

I WAS disgusted to read that Harlow Council took away a man's home from Fern Hill on Friday, February 9.

John Jones, 57, was living in a small caravan with his two dogs and all his belongings. This man has caused no problems to the residents, or to the town. He is just a man trying to keep a roof over his head. Photos of John and his belongings were shown on the new Spotted Harlow Facebook page, showing John crying with his two dogs, over the space where his caravan used to be. It is a basic human right for each human to have shelter.

If Harlow Council have removed this man's shelter, they should home him, but they left him there with nothing. We don't know this man's past, he might have had a house once, but lost his job, we don't know. We must come together as a community and support John and his dogs. Alfreia Tobias has set up a change.org petition for us to sign to get John's caravan back, you can find it on the Harlow Moaning page on Facebook. Please sign it. Alfreia is also setting up a just giving page. If we all donate a pound to this page, we can buy John his home back.

It is disgraceful that the council can be so cruel and callous towards an innocent man. We all deserve a safe space to call home.

Far from the whole story

CERTAINLY the centenary of votes for (some) women is worth commemorating. But the activities of the Women's Political and Social Union, led by the Pankhursts, are far from the whole story. My mother was old enough to vote in 1918, and I am fairly sure that throughout her long life she exercised her right to vote on every possible occasion. However, she was not a militant suffragette. She and my father were members of the Independent Labour Party, which of course supported votes for women, but in the wider context of general emancipation of the working class and changing the whole power structure of society. It must be remembered that the 1918 Representation of the People Act was also the first to give the vote to all adult men, a further important extension of the franchise. Keir Hardie, the founder of the ILP and the first leader of the Labour Party, led the campaign for these advances from his earliest years in the House of Commons. So the final achievement of the vote was not due solely to the WPSU, but also to many other factors, including the rise of women's trade unionism (my mother was a member of the National Federation of Women Workers, and took part in a Mill Girls' strike in 1910) and the experience of women workers in World War 1.

Further, while the vote is a vital part of the democratic process, it is not an end in itself, only a means to an end. It is only truly meaningful as the culmination of continuing daily and yearly activity, political and societal, at all levels. It is still within the context of power in society, which affects everyone, not only women, as my parents recognised. And there is still a long, long way to go to achieve the kind of society that they devoted their lives to working for. I am sure Ann Wafula Strike would agree with that.

TALKING POINT

The battle for equality must go on

THE BIG QUESTION:

With the gender pay gap issue still making headlines, will this bring positive change for working class women as well as those in high-profile roles?

LABOUR

Maggie Hulcoop

WE are now in the year 2018 but still women are fighting for equal pay with their male counterparts. Why on earth is there still this gender gap?

We have come a long way since those wonderful and courageous women fought for equality 100 years ago. We now take a free vote for everyone for granted but those women had to fight for our rights as women.

Would they be surprised that women are still having to fight for equal rights today?

There is still a stigma on the fact that women take career breaks to have a family and although things are definitely changing there are still work places where women are asked at interview stage if they are going to have children.

Do men have the question of whether they are going and want to be a father, No?

We as women will continue to fight for our equal rights in job rights and equal opportunities plus the same pay rights as men and the reason why?

Because of the courage of those suffragettes 100 years ago – they did not let us down and we will not let them down.

The 100 women who have taken on Tesco about their pay rates are the modern day equivalent of those wonderful suffragettes. Their fight will benefit women who are unfairly paid, all over the world. We must stand with them and ensure that this is the battle that we fight for our children and grandchildren as they fought and won for us all those years ago.

A long way to go – but PACT aims to help

BEING the parent of a child with autism can be extremely stressful.

You can find yourself navigating difficulties in numerous situations to ensuring your child receives the support they are legally entitled to have.

While a lot of work has been done to increase public understanding of autism in recent years, there is still a long way to go, and PACT parents often need emotional support and a place to be heard and understood, without judgement.

As a result, PACT holds monthly parent and carer support and information meetings in Harlow and Bishop's Stortford to help parents and West Essex providing support for autism.

There are many excellent organisations in East Herts

The right support from an organisation with expertise and understanding can be a godsend, and an essential part of our work at PACT is signposting parents to decent specialist help.

However, there are so many organisations providing services in the area that it's sometimes difficult to get a sense of exactly what you need, or to find out the full range of what's on offer.

As a result, PACT for Autism are hosting an information event this summer to bring our top pick of the organisations in the area straight to you.

The event will take place on Friday, June 8 from noon to 5pm in the main hall and dining hall of the Lutton Bush Centre on Southern Way, Harlow.

Over 20 autism-focused organisations from East Herts and West Essex will be present, with staff, information and resources for you to take away.

The main hall will be set up with stalls for you to visit and learn about the various services available in the region.

Six specialist services will also be placed in the dining hall to discuss any legal, educational, health and transport issues you may be having.

In the meantime, you can visit www.pactforautism.org.uk for dates of parent/carer support meetings, lists of resources and access to services for children and adults or follow PACT on social media for regular updates.

Cute canine, Milo, is ready to lead the pack on charity walk

PERFECT pooch Milo, a seven-month-old cockapoo puppy, will be taking the lead when St Clare Hospice holds its popular Winter Walkies on Sunday, February 25.

Milo has been named St Clare's Cutest Canine after he won a Facebook competition to find the top dog to lead the pack at the sponsored 5km countryside walk.

From pugs and puppies, to collies and cocker spaniels, a total of 29 handsome hounds and pretty pups entered the online photo competition, with more than 1,500 votes cast over five days.

Milo, owned by Nadine Walker and her partner Pete, won ahead of 28 other dogs after polling an incredible 439 votes on the Hospice's Facebook page.

Nadine Walker, from Harlow, said: "I was over the moon when Milo won the Cutest Canine Competition."

"He is only seven-months-old so this will be his first time at the Winter Walkies event and we are really looking forward to it."

"I think fundraising events like Winter Walkies are such a fun idea to help create awareness for the charity.

"The online competition was a great way to get more people involved in the event and I have tried to encourage everyone I know to come along and walk with Milo and I on the day."

"I'm just really happy that Milo can help promote the event, and hopefully raise lots of money for the hospice."

St Clare challenges and events fundraiser Emma Broadbent said: "We know our supporters are barking mad for their pets, but we were overwhelmed with the response to our Winter Walkies competition."

"The event, which has been kindly sponsored by Forest Vets, is one of the most popular in the hospice fundraising calendar and we can't wait to meet all our new four-legged friends."

If you and your dog would like to join Milo and Nadine at St Clare's Winter Walkies event at 11am on Sunday, February 25, then register online at www.stclarehospice.org.uk/event/winter-walkies or call the fundraising team on 01279 773750.

Advance registration costs

Milo, the seven-month-old Cockapoo, will take part in Winter Walkies

£10 for adults and £5 for children, which includes a free soup, dog medal and certificates for children.

The event is taking place at St Clare Hospice,

Hastingwood Road, Hastingwood, Essex.

New partnership will open the door to business involvement

RAINBOW Services has entered into a partnership with Harlow and District Chamber of Commerce to deliver a new project.

It will facilitate a more structured approach to corporate social responsibility and to create a better pipeline for business involvement and volunteering opportunities with the wider voluntary sector and local community.

Initial funds have been secured from Essex Community Foundation with a top up from Harlow District Council to turn this ambition into a reality.

This is a unique and timely opportunity to create a completely different approach and for the creation of a more productive and longer term relationship with the business community – one which is mutually beneficial between the sectors.

Over the past few months Rainbow Services has been working alongside Sharon Summerfield from the Prince of Wales charity Business in the Community and has visited many local charities to discuss their requirements and to find out the ways the project could benefit them.

Many charities in Harlow are looking for trustees and it is often hard for charities to find a diverse mix of trustees.

Rainbow Services is very interested in finding younger trustees who have skills they can use in the role, and would love to see businesses supporting this by allowing time off for employees to attend meetings, usually just couple of hours each month or quarter.

In return, the business will be developing its employee, who will be learning essential leadership and management skills, which they will then bring back to the business.

In addition to trustee vacancies there are volunteering opportunities in areas such as finance, marketing, web maintenance and design and local conservation work as well as being involved in social events, guest speaking or to offer free meeting spaces.

There are a few new and exciting projects coming up over the next few months and if you are interested in finding out more about the project, would like to discuss opportunities at your

A marathon effort for hospice

HASTINGWOOD-BASED St Clare Hospice, is offering two people the opportunity to participate in the Brighton Marathon on Sunday, April 15, in aid of the hospice.

Starting at Preston Park, the 26.2 mile route winds through the city streets and finishes on the spectacular Brighton seafront.

This offers a great opportunity for those keen runners who did not secure a place for the world-renowned London Marathon.

With the sea providing the stunning backdrop, this race in one of the country's most vibrant cities gets bigger and better every year. Renowned for its buzzing atmosphere and roaring support of the crowd, it offers a running experience perfect for both seasoned athletes and first-time marathon challengers.

Clare Gallagher ran the 2016 Brighton Marathon for St Clare Hospice and said: "I couldn't recommend Brighton Marathon enough. I had the most fantastic experience.

"The atmosphere and buzz on the day is amazing, the streets are lined with people cheering your name and the runners around you encouraging each other."

She continued: "The marathon has plenty of support, with lots of water stations throughout the route and local people handing out Jelly Babies as you run past. On crossing the finishing line you walk into the finishers' village, with a steel band playing, and food and drink in abundance.

It finishes right by the sea so you can dip your weary feet."

Participation in the Brighton Marathon in aid of St Clare Hospice requires a £50 deposit and runners are asked to commit to raising at least £500 in sponsorship. For more information and to apply, visit: www.stclarehospice.org.uk/event/brighton-marathon-2018

Recalling a royal visit to Harlow in 1965

FIFTY-THREE years ago this spring, Harlow had a royal visit from a princess, writes Ryan Karolak, curator of Harlow Museum.

Princess Alexandra arrived by helicopter at Harlow Heliport on the Tuesday, April 27, 1965, in particularly dark and wet weather. From here she was taken by car to the soon-to-be-opened hospital of which she was to have it named after. At the time, this was a well-kept secret.

During this car journey she was met by some 1,500 people, mostly children along Second and Third Avenue determined to endure the dismal weather for a short glimpse of the princess.

By the time she arrived at the hospital in the early afternoon the sun started to break through the clouds and the marquee event was flush with 600 guests ready to meet the princess and formally open the hospital.

Guests included Sir Graham Rowlandson, chairman of the North-East Metropolitan Regional Hospital Board; Sir John Ruggles-Brise, Lord Lieutenant of Essex; alongside members of the Harlow Development Corporation, St John's Ambulance, Red Cross Society and the hospital's staff such as doctors and nurses.

After giving an address to the guests, she was brought to the front door of the hospital and given the key by Mr S.E.T. Cusdin, architect for the hospital. A cheer was heard throughout the crowd and after a short interlude, people began to enter the building.

After unveiling a ceremonial plaque for the Princess Alexandra Hospital, she went on a tour of the facilities with an entourage of doctors and nurses to welcome her.

Harlow is known as being a "pram town" and this event was a good example of this in action.

Between exiting the hospital and returning to the marquee and car, she was met by a large number of mothers with prams looking to get around the barriers for a closer look of the princess.

It was reported in a newspaper as follows:

"Scores of children and some mothers pushing prams had managed to gatecrash the tickets-by-invitation-only event. They crowded round the walk for a glimpse of the princess."

Rockney star Chas launches campaign

ROCKNEY star Chas Hodges – one half of Chas and Dave – is helping to launch a musical campaign in Harlow.

The musician, whose partnership is famed for its pub sing-a-long style of music, appears in new film Instrument of Change: Street Piano.

The documentary looks at the trend of street pianos which are popping up around the world and bring players and audiences together. A screening by Club Foot at Burnt Mill Academy, in Harlow, will be attended by Chas and Henri Herbert, former member of the Jim Jones Revue, who will also perform live on the night. The event will be the launch of a fundraising project to bring street pianos to public places in Harlow.

Adam Smith, Club Foot venue manager, said: "I'm really excited to be able to host this event. After watching the film, I was inspired to do something. I've worked with Henri and Chas on many occasions, promoting their gigs in Harlow and travelling the country with them. A YouTube clip of Henri

Chas Hodges – one half of Chas and Dave, appears in new film Instrument of Change: Street Piano

"This is the start of a wider project where we would like to see pianos in public spaces in Harlow and Stansted. I see daily in schools how a piano can draw people together and how it highlights a common interest in those who may not necessarily interact otherwise. This is the first event like this we have held. It's more than just a screening as we'll have the filmmaker and some of the stars of the film in attendance and performing, making it a fully interactive experience."

Henri said: "Street pianos are a fun way to bring people together and share stories."

Tickets, costing £10, for the screening at 7.30pm on March 29, are available at musicglue.com/clubfootharlow

Fancy dress time as pupils imagine what it will be like to do dream jobs

YOUNG people in Harlow dream of being surgeons, zoo keepers, dentists, teachers – and popstars.

Children at Cooks Spinney Primary Academy and Roydon Primary Academy were challenged to go into school dressed for their dream job.

The aspirational schools encouraged pupils to indulge in their dreams, whatever they might be.

Michael Clark, head of school at Roydon, said: "At Roydon, we are privileged to have such a supportive community; the outfits children came into school in were brilliant! Our school motto is Dream, Believe, Achieve and our dream job day rally did relate to this. Our children have some wonderful dreams and aspirations and we hope we as a school can go a long way to helping them achieve their dreams."

Neil Stirrat, head of school at Cooks Spinney, said: "The aim of the day was simple – to have fun and raise aspirations."

We want our pupils to always think about why they attend school and what they need to do to achieve their dreams, however ambitious those dreams may be." Stuart Pope, executive head for both schools, said the Burnt Mill Academy Trust is about helping young people to achieve their goals, no matter where they start in life.

He said: "My philosophy for achieving outstanding outcomes for all young people was summed up on our simple dress-up day. When challenged to come into school dressed for their dream job, we didn't follow the example set by some other schools of banning footballer, vlogger and popstar costumes. Why put barriers on young dreams; why not give them the belief all of those dreams – no matter how wild – really are within reach. That's what I believe and that's what we teach our children. Once they have that belief in themselves, we give them the tools, the characteristics and the drive to get them there.

"Our dress-up day wasn't just full of YouTubers and racing drivers, though, our young people also dream of becoming doctors, zoo keepers, dentists and teachers. Our young people are imaginative and ambitious. The day really reflected the aspirational tone of our schools. It was more than just a dress-up day, it showed they are already thinking about what they want in the future and what they need to do to achieve it."

Teachers across the schools also dressed as superheroes, actors and sports stars.

Primary is now one of the best in the country

THE journey of improvement continues at a Harlow primary, spurred on further by it being confirmed as one of the best in the country.

Little Parndon Primary Academy was placed sixth nationally in the latest Department for Education school performance tables for its Key Stage 2 achievements, with it taking the top spot for reading results, where 96 per cent achieved national standard.

The table shows 84-percent of pupils at the school are meeting the national standard expected of them in reading, writing and maths. Reading and maths progress is well above average and writing is considered to be above average. The overall results mean the school is in the top ten per cent of schools nationally and the third best in Essex.

When the Burnt Mill Academy Trust took control of the school in 2015, it had been given a Requires Improvement grading by Ofsted.

Sophie Laing stepped in as head of school and set about turning the situation around.

She said: "The school was ranked below 300 on the table previously; it was near the bottom. We have taken the school from the bottom to the top in a couple of years. The school has never been near the top, nationally or in Essex.

"The turnaround has happened through developing excellent teaching, by carefully crafting a bespoke curriculum, by creating a sense of comradery across the school and in Year 6, particularly by adopting the Incredibles theme. We finely tuned each child's curriculum timetable and became acutely aware of the various needs of those individuals.

"It has been a three-year process to get to this point."

New leaders were brought in to focus on improving teaching, children's progress, attainment, reception and Year 6 transition, early years, literacy, numeracy, Key Stage 1 and special educational needs.

Mrs Laing, now executive headteacher of Little Parndon and Freshwaters Primary Academy, said: "Expectations were raised, the quality of teaching was improved and children's needs were met which resulted in these wonderful SATs results. Progress has always been good at the school, but now with the change in culture the attainment is where children are making headway. The model we have implemented is sustainable and will see these standards continue.

The journey of improvement continues at a Harlow primary

"I am proud and blessed to have such highly skilled and dedicated staff who bring the very best out of all the children. I am immensely pleased for the children and their families."

With the school having now also secured a Good Ofsted rating, next on the list of improvements is the school environment.

Mrs Laing said: "Now we are going in the right direction with our parents behind us, I am going to focus on creating an outstanding environment for our children. Our vibrant PTA are devoting the year to fundraising for new outside play equipment and I am researching sensory rooms to install in the school next year."

An additional classroom, which will be freed up when the large Year 6 group move on next year, will become the new library and ICT suite and the existing library will be used for the sensory space. The kitchen is also being developed into the Little Parndon Pantry.

Pensioners enjoy afternoon full of fun, food, entertainment and dancing

PASSMORES Academy warmly welcomed local residents to its annual Senior Citizens' Tea Party for an afternoon of fun, food, entertainment and dancing.

This yearly celebration is usually held in the run up to Christmas but had to be postponed due to inclement weather in December. As a Passmores tradition and much anticipated event, it was decided to reschedule the party to take place this term as a counterpoint to the winter blues. Staff and student volunteers pulled out all the stops to ensure the guests were treated like VIPs, with each one receiving a present which had been donated by school staff.

Passmores staff member and organiser of the event, Lynn Fitzpatrick said: 'Every year the guests really look forward to it and have an amazing time. They particularly love talking to our students who help out, and I receive so many compliments about what lovely young people we have here.'

This year we had more people attend than ever before'. Returning guests, Mr and Mrs Hibbitt, agreed, with Mrs Hibbitt saying:

'We've been coming here for about four years now and we really enjoy it. We like to support the kids; they work so hard and it's lovely chatting to them. They give us a good laugh and the entertainment is always good'.

The popular Passmores Pop Choir provided the music and was enjoyed by first-time guests, Babs and Herby Goward. Mrs Goward said: 'It has been a lovely day. The food and the entertainment were amazing. The older students even managed to get us up to dance!'

Comic show is a brilliant adaptation of loved tale

DISCWORLD is a comic fantasy book series written by the English author Terry Pratchett set on the fictional 'Discworld', a flat disc balanced on the backs of the four elephants which in turn stand on the back of a giant turtle, Great A'Tuin.

The books frequently parody or take inspiration from other famous authors like JRR Tolkien, Charles Dickens and William Shakespeare, as well as mythology, folklore and fairy tales, often using them for satirical parallels with current cultural, political and scientific issues. The series is hugely popular, with more than 80 million books sold in 37 languages. And when in 2003 the nation voted on the BBC's 2003 Big Read contest and the 'Nation's Best-loved Book'; Mort was among the Top 100 and chosen as the most popular of Terry Pratchett's work.

Originally published in 1987, it is the fourth in the series and the first to focus on the character Death, who only appeared as a side character in the previous stories.

Adapted for the stage by Stephen Briggs, this tells the story of Mort, who has been selected as Death's apprentice. He gets board and lodging and free use of company horse, and doesn't even need time off for his grandmother's funeral. The trouble begins when instead of collecting the soul of a Princess, he kills her would-be assassin, and changes the course of destiny.

Stephen Briggs' adaptation

Mort and Princess Keli prepare to battle the Real Reality'

is faithful to Pratchett's dialogue and he acts like a curator of the good bit's, seeking to best link together the comic brilliance of his writing into a stageable production. Which is quite tricky bearing in mind the premise of a flat pizza style world and the multiple locations of the play.

Harlow Theatre Company are relishing the challenges of presenting this fast-

Barbara Daniels has self published a young persons novel

Mum's debut novel tells an exciting tale for youngsters

BARBARA Daniels a 46-year-old mother of four from Harlow has fulfilled her dream of becoming a published writer.

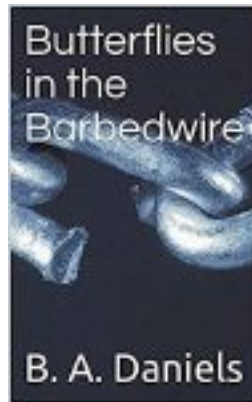

She has been writing the childrens book 'Butterflies in the barbedwire' for about a year and half and has recently self published through Amazon.

The book is aimed at 10 to 16 year olds and is the story of an eleven year old girl called Heidi whose identical twin sister Sylvia is taken off to be euthanised in 1940s Germany. The novel depicts the dramatic rescue by Heidi as she runs away from home and travels to Berlin to rescue Sylvia from the institute.

The story had many twist and turns and is a thought provoking, exciting and interesting childrens novel.

New council manager is keen to get on with job

BRIAN Keane has been appointed managing director of Harlow Council.

Brian who took up the role in November 2017 on an acting basis was appointed to the role permanently at the council meeting on February 1, 2018.

The permanent appointment follows a proposal agreed by the Council in April 2017 to create a new single chief officer post for the authority. The managing director replaces the former posts of chief executive and chief operating officer.

Reducing the Council's top management team to one post saves the council more than £424,000 over the next four years.

Brian, who was the council's head of governance for four and a half years, has held senior management roles in other Essex councils including working at Brentwood and Braintree and has carried out governance investigations for public bodies.

Brian, said: "Harlow is a great place with huge potential and I am delighted to take up this opportunity on a permanent basis.

"I have enjoyed working in this role over the last few months and my priority is to continue working with and support our fantastic staff, councillors and partners to ensure that we deliver what the local community wants and needs. This is a huge opportunity in a very exciting place and I can't wait to get on with the job."

Jazz club going strong after 15 years of entertaining the town's music fans

WHEN a small group of jazz enthusiasts got together and talked about the lack of live jazz on their doorstep and what they could do about it, little did they realise that their dream that day would become a reality.

As Marigold's Jazz Club enters its fifteenth year this band of volunteers should be proud of what they have achieved. Starting with the support of local musicians, the Club has developed into one of the top jazz venues in the Home Counties. Some of the top musicians in the country have performed at the Club. Of the forty musicians and vocalists recently nominated for the 2017 British Jazz Awards twenty six of them have appeared over the years. No mean feat for a small venue.

Some of the best jazz pianists Britain has to offer, live locally including Ted Beament, Brian Dee, Mike Gorman and Peter Lemer. All of whom appear regularly at the Club.

As the Jazz Club became established volunteers realised that there was also an audience for blues music with very few venues offering a place where live music could be listened to. So Marigolds Blues Club was born and this January it celebrated its tenth birthday. Once again the Club searches for and employs some of the best blues acts around, many of whom play all over the country and in Europe. With the loss of many small venues (London alone has lost around 40% of its venues), it is great to see that one small venue in Harlow is doing something to reverse this trend. For without grassroots venues it's difficult to envisage a sustained and successful future for British music as so many individuals not only start but sustain their musical careers that way.

Marigolds Jazz Club is held on the last Friday of every month and Marigolds Blues Club on the middle Friday of every month.

On Friday, February 9 the Blues Club hosts Katie Bradley with the Chris Corcoran Trio; and on Friday, February 23, the Jazz Club hosts the Rob Baron Quartet featuring Nat Steel on vibes.

FOOD & DRINK

Catch of the skrei

INGREDIENTS:

(Serves 3)
3 Norwegian skrei fillets (deboned and skinned) - or any cod available
175g cooking chorizo
2 small white onions, sliced
2 garlic cloves, sliced
70g cavolo nero, roughly chopped
125g cherry tomatoes, quartered
1 sprig thyme
200ml fish stock

For the cannellini beans (best prepared the day before):
240g dried cannellini beans
1 carrot, peeled
1/2 shallot
1tsp sea salt
Salt and pepper

METHOD:

1. Soak the beans in cold water for at least five hours. Once doubled in size, drain and rinse. Place in a large pan with the carrot and shallot, season and cover with cold water. Bring to the boil, scoop off any foam and reduce heat to a gentle simmer. Cover and cook for approximately one hour, adding more water if it gets too low. Once tender, strain and discard the cooked carrot and shallot.

2. Slice the chorizo into bite-size morsels. Sear in a frying pan over med-high heat for three minutes on each side (no fat needed). Remove the chorizo from pan and set aside on kitchen paper. Use the fat left in the pan to sear the onions, garlic and cavolo nero. Cook for about four minutes until tender. Then add the tomatoes and cook for a further five minutes until softened.
3. Finally, add the cooked beans, chorizo, thyme and stock together with the Skrei. Reduce heat to a gentle simmer and cook for approximately eight minutes.
4. Season to taste and discard the sprig of thyme before serving. Plate simply with the skrei placed over a good bed of the stew.

WARM & HEARTY
STEWED SKREI WITH CANNELLINI BEANS AND CHORIZO

T'S rather extraordinary to be 300km north of the Arctic Circle, in the land of the Northern Lights, eating fresh cod - so fresh it was still swimming the fjords a couple of hours ago - with two-Michelin-starred chef Michel Roux Jr. But this isn't just any old cod (and it's certainly not battered).

Roux is a Norway Seafood Council skrei ambassador, and we're in Tromsø (alongside a group of talented UK chefs) for skrei cod season, which runs from January to April.

The fish are muscular, hulking things, with red rimmed eyes and scales the colour of razor clam shells - and they're a national delicacy.

Fishing for a skrei supper involves patience and thermals

Roux visits Tromsø for skrei season year after year, but promises: "It doesn't lose any of the magic."

Out on the fjords surrounding Sommarøy Island, an hour north of Tromsø airport, and squeezed into thickly padded onesies to ward off great sprays of seawater and the freezing temperatures (it's minus eight degrees), you can see his point. We're flanked by ragged, snow-dusted mountains, the sun barely cresting their summits.

Captain Ketil Voll instructs us to reel our lines out - no bait needed - until we can feel the weight hit the sea bed, and then swoop our rods back and forth in big, arcing motions ("You have to work to get the cod's attention").

My first catch is a silvery slip of a thing - and sadly not a skrei ("Cat food," announces one of the crew), but my next two are; heavy on the line and wrestling powerfully until hoisted over the edge.

In previous years, the skrei would be sharing the water with orca, as well as whales feasting

Michel Roux Jr. with his skrei

ELLA WALKER JOINS CHEF MICHEL ROUX JNR ON A FISHING TRIP IN NORWAY

on herring, but this year the herring are absent, the water not being cool enough, which means no whales. Sea eagles still roil and whirl overhead though.

Back on dry land we settle down to a meal of skrei molje, a traditional Norwegian dish that uses every available morsel of the cod.

Served with amber glasses of aquavit, we start with corrugated curls of butter on brittle, nutty crackerbreads before being presented with wedges of barely grainy, pale pink skrei roe.

Roux explains that "the pinker the roe, the more shrimp the cod must have eaten - just like flamingos".

There are also steamed, skinless potatoes and the cod flesh itself, poached, luminous white and flaking succulently at the slightest nudge of a fork - we liberally grind over fresh black pepper and sprinkle on finely chopped raw white onion.

A tray of stuffed cod stomach, gelatinous with a slightly spongy crust has a rubbery wobble to it.

"Go on - be brave," Roux says, passing the platter. It's not totally unpleasant, although a little chewy.

A fragrant bowl of skrei liver appears, greyish blobs of it floating lightly in an oily liquor.

I'm sceptical again, but people heave huge dollops of the stuff onto their plates.

"The best way to eat it, if you're nervous, is to squash a potato, add a bit of pepper, and mix the liver in like butter - it melts," Roux tells me - and he's right, it dissolves into a rich, umami dressing that's not fishy at all.

"It's so, so simple, and the fish is so clean," says Roux.

"When it's this fresh, nothing is so good."

Here are three of Michel Roux Jr.'s recipes to try at home.

■ ELLA Walker was a guest of the Norwegian Seafood Council.

Skrei is available during the January-April season from Harrods, Selfridges, Booths, Whole Foods Market, quality fishmongers and top restaurants (season timings according to the migratory progress of the skrei).

CHINESE New Year is upon us and the celebrations to mark the Year of the Dog will continue until the Lantern Festival on Friday March 2. That means you have plenty of time to mark the occasion with a lovely Chinese meal and wine pairing.

Aromatic white wines are great (such as gewurztraminer or riesling) but if you don't want to step too much out of your comfort zones, here are three white wines tried and tested with Chinese dishes.

Peter Yealands Sauvignon Blanc 2017 (around £8 Sainsbury's, Co-op, 12.5% abv) Last week I visited the home of this wine in Marlborough, New Zealand, and tasted it with Yealands' winemaker Jeff Fyfe. A few yards away the ocean crashed against the coastline as the vineyards bathed in the sun.

The wine has a zip of juicy lemon and lime, tropical fruit and a lovely mineral quality. At home, before my NZ visit, I'd enjoyed a glass with stir-fried prawns and noodles dashed with flecks of chilli.

Gasper Chardonnay Rebula, Slovenia 2016 (£9.95, etonvintners.com, 12.5% abv) A Slovenian wine might not be the obvious choice to go with Chinese food, but this smooth, slightly dry white is perfect with the hot, sweet and sour flavours of a typical takeaway banquet. There's very little acidity on the tongue and it's hard to imagine a Chinese dish it wouldn't go with. The Ribolla Gialla grape is the secret ingredient, giving extra depth of flavour and a subtle, rounded finish to the chardonnay, in a roughly 50-50 blend.

Hunawir Pinot Gris Lieu-dit Muehlforst (£14.99, or £12.99 in a buy six deal at Majestic, 13% abv) is a veritable treat with Chinese pork belly. This pinot gris, from the French region of Alsace, is alive and zingy with quince and apricot, and a slight dash of spice. I won't lie, I've been sipping a few glasses of pinot gris in the past few days and it is definitely my new favourite wine.

WIN THE WINES THE STARS WILL BE DRINKING:

IF you're settling down to watch the EE British Academy Film Awards ceremony on Sunday don't be jealous of the stars sipping their celebratory wines because I'm offering you the chance to win those same wines.

I have three prizes to give away, of three bottles each, which will include an exclusive BAFTA-labelled bottle of Champagne Taittinger Brut Réserve NV; a Villa Maria

Private Bin Sauvignon Blanc 2017 and a Villa Maria Private Bin Pinot Noir 2016. Taittinger and Villa Maria (New Zealand's most awarded winery) are both long-term partners to BAFTA.

To be in with a chance of winning, tell me the names of the three grapes which are allowed in a champagne blend.

Email your answer to jane@onefootinthegrapes.co.uk by noon, Wednesday February 21. Title your email 'WIN WINES' and please include a mainland UK address and telephone number for delivery.

Only one entry per household and entrants must be 18 or over.

INGREDIENTS: (Serves 4)
4 Norwegian skrei fillets (deboned and skinned) - or any cod fillets
1ltr milk; 1tbsp salt

For the curry infused oil:
100ml rapeseed oil
1tbsp curry powder

For the pickled radishes:
1 bunch radishes
Pinch of mustard seeds
2 crushed black peppercorns
200ml water
200ml white wine vinegar
2tsp fine salt
3tbsp honey

For the roasted cauliflower:
150g large cauliflower florets
Drizzle of olive oil
Pinch of chilli powder

For the cauliflower puree:
Drizzle of olive oil
400g cauliflower florets
1tbsp curry powder
1tbsp chopped garlic
300ml milk
1tbsp salted butter
1tbsp extra thick double cream
Zest of half a lemon
Coriander cress for dressing
Salt and pepper

METHOD:
1. For the curry infused oil, place the oil in a saucepan and gently heat to 60°C. Stir in the curry powder and cover pan with cling film. Set aside to infuse for two hours.

2. To make pickled radishes, rinse and trim the radishes. Slice finely or for extra crunch, quarter. Place in a half-litre jar with mustard seeds and peppercorns.
3. Bring the water, vinegar, salt and honey to the boil in a pan. Once at a rolling boil, pour into the jar of radishes. Cool to room temperature before using.
4. Preheat oven to 200°C. Place the cauliflower florets in a bowl. Combine with the oil, chilli powder and a pinch of salt. Spread onto a baking tray and roast for 25-30 minutes until charred.
5. For the puree, put the olive oil in a pan over a medium heat. Sweat the cauliflower for two minutes. Add the curry powder and garlic and sear for a further two minutes. Add the milk and simmer for 10 minutes until tender and three quarters of the liquid has evaporated. Transfer to a blender and puree with the butter and cream. Once silky smooth, season with salt, pepper and lemon zest.

6. For the fish, pour the milk into a pan and season with salt. Place over a gentle heat. Once simmering, carefully add the skrei and cook for six to eight minutes. Remove the fish from the milk and serve immediately with the puree and cauliflower. Garnish with pickled radishes and herbs.

INGREDIENTS: (Serves 6)
6 thick Norwegian skrei cod fillets (deboned and skinned) - or any available cod; 1tbsp rapeseed oil

For the glaze:
3tbsp mirin; 1tbsp light soy sauce; 3tbsp sake; 50g brown caster sugar; 150g white miso paste; 1tbsp sesame oil

For the puree:
1tbsp butter; 6 carrots, roughly chopped; 1tbsp freshly grated ginger; 400ml vegetable stock (or water)

For the crispy kale:
175g kale, roughly chopped
Drizzle of oil; Salt and pepper

For the fried chickpeas:
1 x 400g can chickpeas
Drizzle of rapeseed oil
1tsp fine salt
1tsp paprika

METHOD:

1. Place the mirin, soy sauce, sake and sugar in a small saucepan. Heat gently and mix until all the sugar has dissolved. Remove from the heat and whisk in the miso paste together with sesame oil until combined. Leave to cool to room temperature. Coat the cod with the marinade, cover with cling film and infuse overnight.

2. The next day, melt the butter in a pan over a medium heat. Add the carrots and ginger and cook for three to four minutes. Pour in the stock, reduce the heat and simmer for a further eight to 10 minutes. Once the carrots are cooked and the liquid has reduced by two-thirds, transfer the veggies and cooking liquor to a blender and puree. Once silky smooth, season to taste.
3. Season the kale with oil, salt and pepper, coating all the leaves. Spread onto a baking tray and roast for eight minutes at 160°C until crisp. Leave to cool.
4. Heat the oven to 200°C.

Drain the chickpeas and rinse. Transfer to a kitchen towel and pat dry. Spread out onto a baking tray, season with a drizzle of oil, salt and paprika and roast for 25 minutes until crisp.
5. Ten minutes prior to the chickpeas being cooked, turn your attention to the skrei. Heat the oil in a non-stick pan over a high heat. Sear the skrei for two minutes on each side, caramelising its exterior. Transfer to a baking tray and place in the oven for eight to 10 minutes until golden brown.
6. Serve on a drizzle of puree, delicately sprinkle the chickpeas and garnish with the crispy kale.

MUSIC

The Country club

THE SONGS REMAIN THE SAME, EVEN IF THE LINE-UP DOESN'T.
MARTIN NEAL TALKS TO BIG COUNTRY'S MARK BRZEZICKI

WHEN you lose a frontman as charismatic and well-loved as Stuart Adamson, you'd expect it to be near on impossible for a band to find a way forward.

But 80s hitmakers Big Country took the brave decision to reignite the band after their singer and guitarist's death and they're relishing the opportunity to bring their songs to old and new audiences alike.

"I didn't predict anything would happen at any point in my career when I started out in the band in 1981," admitted drummer Mark Brzezicki. "To still be playing in the same band is great."

"I'm grateful that people still want to come and see us because I never thought I'd be in a band this long. It's really run away with itself."

"If we'd had the global success of U2 it would be a different story but looks at other bands that were around at the same time as us – Spandau Ballet, Level 42 and the like – they've stood the test of time as well."

"We tend to just work weekends now. The music industry has a different dynamic to back in the 1980s."

"Back then there was Top of the Pops, a host of magazines and TV stations you needed to get yourself out there but nowadays the internet has made things a lot different."

Fields of Fire, In a Big Country, Look Away, Wonderland are just a few of the absolute belters that Big Country took into the charts back then and are delighted audiences with today.

But with no Adamson (Simon Hough is on lead vocals these days) and no bassist Tony Butler, is the present day version of Big Country still the real deal?

"Let the audience decide," says Brzezicki. "Some people don't know our history so when they come along to see us they will judge us on what they see and nothing else."

"You are getting a great band and we can't bring Stuart back so this is the best regeneration of the band you are going to get."

"There are many bands who change line-ups – there are some bands out there who don't even have an original member in the line-up!"

"We have kept alive the songs and you are getting a show that people can come and enjoy."

"Simon does a great job and he doesn't try to be Stuart. He doesn't jump around the stage and pretend it's his band."

Mike Peters of The Alarm fronted the reborn Big Country some years ago and an album, The Journey, followed.

But Brzezicki says fans shouldn't expect another new offering any time soon.

"We put out an album a few years ago with Mike Peters singing but nothing really happened," he reflected. "It really isn't worth the effort."

"We pacified a few diehards who were saying 'why don't you record some new material?'"

"But what people really wanted to hear were tracks from our back catalogue, especially when we've got such an extensive back catalogue."

"Songs remind you of where you were when you were when you heard them – where you lived, your job, who you were going out with. They reignite those emotions."

"That's why the Rewind festivals are so big. People want to get in touch with their past through music."

With that in mind, he tells people going to one of their shows: "Forget it's even called Big Country – it's a great band with great songs that you're going to enjoy."

■ Big Country play Colchester Arts Centre on Friday, February 23, supported by The Occupants. They have also confirmed a date at Chinnerys, Southend, on November 9.

COMING UP

A SLOOT on the Stortford Music Festival main stage will be awarded to the winner of Sounds Like Teen Spirit competition for under-18s, at the 2018 Bish Bash which takes place on May 5-6 on Sworders Field in Bishop's Stortford.

The competition is open to solo musicians or full bands.

Musicians are encouraged to send links to their music to stortfordmusicfestival@hotmail.co.uk to compete for a place in the final at the URC Hall in Water Lane, Bishop's Stortford on April 14.

DOWN THE PUB

SATURDAY night will see quirky outfit The Mirage Men at the excellent Railway, in Clifftown Road, Southend. It says here:

"Formed in 3,000 BC, The Mirage Men are an Ancient Egyptian surf band, rocking exotic instrumentals straight out of the desert."

"At over 5,000 years old they have survived longer than any other band (apart from the UK Subs) and are feared yet revered for their dazzling, mysterious blue sock-gold shoe combination."

"Expect to hear the sounds of the east taken into the garage of the mid-sixties for a re-fit. Familiar TV & movie themes sit side-by-side with cult classics, cut to the cloth of Wilson, Keppel and Betty out on a three-day bender."

DREADZONE, CHINNERY'S, SOUTHEND

CLOSE your eyes, feel the vibe and you could be outdoors at a festival on a balmy summer evening.

Actually we were in a modestly-sized concert hall on Southend seaford on a chilly February evening – but that's a measure of how strong the Dreadzone feelgood factor goes.

Love, life, unity is the motto of these infectious dubsters – though it's fair to say not all of that love was extended to those having a chat at the front during the set, as frontman MC Spee was rather eager to point out...

It's impossible not to dance when Dreadzone do their stuff, and as expected Little Britain and Captain Dread were the highlights.

But, as ever, the Dreadzone set was quite simply happiness and contentment in musical form.

Tracks from latest album Dread Times fitted it perfectly with older numbers in a perfect fusion of old school dub and modern techno tricks.

HOT HOUSE

WHO LIVES IN A HOUSE LIKE THIS?

This Harlow terraced house has so much space the agents have likened it to a Tardis

A stunningly spacious terrace house has just gone on the market in Ladyshot, Harlow, for £290,000. With its three double bedrooms, large living room and magnificent rear garden backing onto woodland, estate agents Park Lane have nicknamed the property 'The Tardis'.

Its stylishly contemporary kitchen also brings some extra wow factor to the property. It is fitted with sleek wall and base units with a built-in gas hob, oven and microwave.

The room's walls are part-tiled and there is space for a washing machine and dishwasher in the adjoining utility area.

The open-plan living room overlooks the landscaped rear garden which is accessed by a pair of French doors. It adjoins the large carpeted dining area.

Elsewhere there is a light and bright hallway with stairs rising to the first-floor landing. There is also a downstairs cloakroom with toilet and wall-mounted hand basin.

All three double bedrooms are carpeted. Two have built-in cupboards and overlook the rear garden.

The bathroom/wet room contains a toilet, wash basin, shower cubicle and built-in cupboard.

The private rear garden is impressively designed with a large patio area and raised shrub beds in railway sleepers. A path leads through a grassed area to a pagoda and a covered entertaining area.

There is an array of flowers and shrubs throughout. At the bottom of the garden is a wooden gate leading through to woodland.

At the front of the property is a courtyard garden with a path leading to the front entrance door.

The sale is being handled by Park Lane Property Agents, Bridge Street, Bishop's Stortford. Call them on 01279 949127.

Seven reasons it is still hip to be square

These classic tiles can add a stylish twist to any space, as these diverse schemes show, says AMANDA POLLARD

Square tiles are appearing on many a well-designed wall at the moment, and their sheer simplicity makes them a trend worth sticking with. Their even shape means it's easy to be creative with them, and they work well with a number of different interior styles. Take a look at these rooms for inspiration.

■ Amanda Pollard is a contributor at Houzz. Visit Houzz.co.uk for more design inspiration and home-improvement advice.

MAKE THEM THE MAIN EVENT

Why not give your square tiles star billing? These beautiful grey numbers are a key element in this calm, tranquil bathroom. Their mottled texture reflects the light and gives them a soft look that adds to the cosy feel of the room.

Picture: The Winchester Tile Company

CONTRAST THE GROUT

A plain square white tile might not seem like the most adventurous choice for your walls, but in fact its simplicity allows you to be quite creative. Experiment with colour, grout and layout to design different looks to suit your style.

Here, the brickwork pattern has been enhanced by dark grey grout to make the tiles stand out. The bold design works well here, as it contrasts with the soft grain in the wooden worktop and shelf.

Picture: Sustainable Kitchens

BE BOLD WITH COLOUR

You don't have to stick to white, of course – a simple square tile can look stunning in a vivid colour. The green units and shelves in this kitchen have been finished off with a panel of tiles in a similar shade.

It's a brave choice, but it's paid off and resulted in an original kitchen with bags of personality.

Picture: deVOL Kitchens

SHOWCASE OTHER OBJECTS

Square tiles work in much the same way as metro tiles, in that they can be a great neutral backdrop for other elements.

For instance, if you'd like a patterned floor and vintage furniture to take centre stage, as in this bathroom, consider using some low-key squares on the walls. A simple design like this is subtle and timeless, and will allow you to showcase more elaborate pieces.

Picture: Stephen Karlisch, photographer

PROVIDE SOME SHIMMER

Here's another show-stopping look - a wall of glossy tiles in a deep emerald tone takes this plain kitchen up a level. The tiles here are made from a rich-hued terracotta and have a shiny pitted glaze that plays with the light beautifully.

Picture: Clé tile

DO THE TWIST

For something altogether different, try turning each tile on its head (see picture below).

By twisting the squares to form a diagonal pattern, the designers of this kitchen have created white surfaces that add a definite touch of character and interest to the otherwise minimal space.

Plain, white square tiles are often inexpensive compared to other busier designs and textures, so this look could be a cost-effective way to give your kitchen or bathroom a designer feel.

Picture: Fisher & Paykel Appliances UK & Ireland

GO FOR A GRID LAYOUT

The way you position your square tiles will impact on the whole look. Take this expansive grid, for instance - a brickwork pattern would have looked completely different and might have been too busy with the tiny hexagonal floor tiles. Instead, the rigid lines make a feature of the wall without overpowering other elements in the room. And this is a great design if you're finding it hard to work out how many square tiles you need.

HOME ADVICE

With Alex Neill of Which?

DEALING WITH DAMP

Some jobs around the house you can always leave until later – but damp must be treated immediately

Damp can be a problem in many homes – especially at this time of the year. It comes in all shapes and sizes – none healthy and some potentially expensive to sort. But delay is not an option.

The easiest to deal with are leaky water joints or bathroom spillage. You can see the damage, and often figure out the problem. It could be a DIY job – tightening up a joint or resealing a shower tray. Ignoring this could bring down plaster or rot woodwork.

Condensation is next easiest to treat. It's caused by warm air meeting cold so it's worse in winter. Windows kitchens and bathrooms are most likely to suffer with damp. Left untouched, it turns into damp and black mould. And possibly brings a nasty smell as well.

The emergency treatment is wiping walls and windows dry. Then look for the cause. It's often bad ventilation – blocking up chimneys and draught-proofing doors can be the culprit.

Turning the heating high and then low – rather than maintaining a constant midway temperature – may also produce condensation.

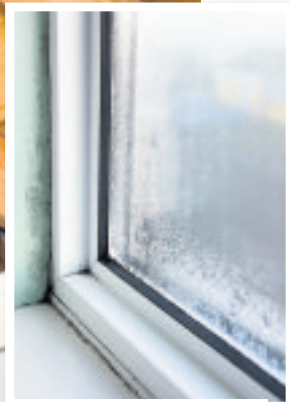

Covering radiators with wet clothing might also be a cause.

But a cure could be as simple as unblocking an external airbrick – perhaps earth or rubbish has piled up.

Putting in an extractor fan is often helpful in kitchens and bathrooms – these cost anything from £20 to £200

Leaking pipes can be the cause of serious structural damage

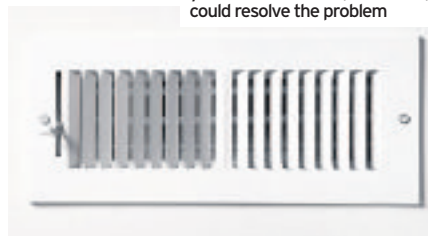

Condensation is an unsightly nuisance, but simple ensuring you have ventilation, see below, could resolve the problem

(plus fitting) depending on location, size and type. Or you could try a dehumidifier. These extract the damp from the room – a good one (and the cheapest may not be best) costs about £400.

Penetrating damp is more serious – and harder and more costly to treat. Signs include damp or black patches on walls which are worse during rainy periods. It may be caused by structural problems such as broken guttering or downpipes, a roof needing repair or replacement, or cracks in external walls. This is generally a “call the builder” rather than a DIY job so the cure is rarely cheap. Finding where the damp enters and treating that usually provides a solution.

Rising damp is probably the most costly and difficult to deal with.

Symptoms include damaged skirting boards or plaster, peeling paint and wallpaper, and wet patches. You may also have problems with floor coverings.

It's caused by ground water moving up through a wall or floor – it will be there even in summer.

This is usually because your damp-proof cause is faulty – anything from earth or rubbish breaching it to a complete failure. It's expensive to replace but without adequate damp course protection, your home is unhealthy – and could be unsellable.

For some damp you might have no choice but to call in the experts

TIPS TO KEEP YOUR HOME COSY AND DRY

- Act as soon as you see a problem – it won't get better on its own (although dry weather can offer a respite from some damp).
- Insurance won't pay out for damp – unless the cause is a sudden flood or burst pipe.
- Mould-killer liquids will help remove unsightly marks but won't prevent the real causes.

- Always get three estimates if it's not a DIY job.
- Which? has worked with the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors to produce average costs on a range of different damp treatments, with prices for terraced, semi-detached and detached houses. Go to which.co.uk for more information.

Grout with the old...

CHLOE KENT shows us how to revamp a bathroom by re-grouting tired tiles

Give your bathroom a fresh new look by regrouting tiles

Nothing puts a downer on the start of the day like stepping into the shower – and locking eyes with blackened, moulding grout around your tiles.

Maintaining bathroom grout can be a nuisance, but putting the job off for months (or even years) only leads to bigger problems.

While it's always important to clean your grout regularly – think at least once a week – to prolong its longevity, the time will eventually come where it needs replacing.

Grout is a very porous concrete, which will inevitably begin to rot no matter how clean your home is – but there needn't be a fixed cycle for re-grouting. It's a process which ought to be conducted as and when necessary, and this will obviously be less often when you maintain good household hygiene.

If it's looking aged, but not quite ready for replacement, then try out a grout reviver, such as Unibond Ice White Grout Reviver Pen 7ml (£7.75, B&Q), a great way to inject some life back into old, tired tiles. Using the pen applicator, simply follow along the lines to cover over old grout, leave to dry for an hour, then wipe the area clean with a damp cloth.

Re-grouting isn't necessarily the arduous task you've been fearing. With the right tools and safety precautions, you could get the job done in as little as an afternoon. Granted, it's not the most exciting way to spend your day off, but it's one of the easiest DIY tricks you can add to your arsenal. Plus, it'll save you money to work on it yourself, rather than paying someone else.

If you've got a large area of grout which needs replacing, try Unibond Wall Tile Adhesive & Grout with Anti-Mould (£8.99, Robert Dyas). For smaller jobs, try Unibond Ice White Grout Reviver 125ml (£8.85, B&Q).

■ Preparation

Make sure you cover and protect around the area you'll be re-grouting with a dust sheet (Robert Dyas sells multi-packs for less than a fiver). If you're working above a sink or bath, then take care to put the plug in too, to prevent grout from going down the drain and causing blockages.

It's important you crack open a window to ventilate the room, as there will be a lot of dust flying about. If this isn't possible, then you must wear a breathing mask instead; the cement particles in the air won't do your lungs any good.

It's also vital you protect your eyes behind some tight-fitting safety goggles for the same reason – a grout particle to the eye is not the reason you want to be hitting A&E.

■ Grind and scrape the old grout
Grout rakes are your best bet for small re-grouting projects, as they're a quick and effective way to manually strip out old grout.

Starting at the corner of your tiles, allow the blade teeth to cut into the grout, slicing firmly in one direction. The grout will then spiral free or become loose enough to be gently pulled away.

An electric grout remover – such as the Bosch PMF 190 E Electric 190W All Rounder Multifunctional Tool (£79.99, Homebase) – is ideal on larger areas, as it is much less labour intensive. When using an electric grout remover, be sure to start in the middle of the tile joint instead of the corner, as the rotating blades could otherwise cause your tiling to become chipped. Begin on the vertical joints before moving onto the horizontal ones.

Strip the grout to the thickness of the tile. Once the grout has been removed, wipe over the entire surface with a damp sponge.

■ Applying the new grout

Mix up the fresh grout according to package instructions, or if it's pre-prepared, then squeeze it into your grout spreader and get going.

Work the fresh grout into the joints – and don't worry too much about any mess at this stage, it really doesn't need to be perfect. Do keep things clean as you go, but focus primarily on filling all the joints first.

Once they're done, you can remove any excess. You're going to want to plough ahead at a steady pace, as the grout will begin to harden.

Let the grout set for about 20 minutes until a film develops over the tile, and then thoroughly clean the area. Wipe away the excess grout and film off the face of the tiles with a damp sponge, rinsing often.

■ Finishing and polishing

Using a grout finishing tool (you can pick these up for under a fiver at hardware and DIY stores), drag the rounded end evenly over the joints with smooth, sweeping motions to create an even-looking finish.

Leave to dry again for around three hours, then use a soft, clean sponge to polish away any film which has formed over the grout. And finally – congratulations – you've thoroughly re-grouted your bathroom tiles!

YOUR GARDEN

With Diarmuid Gavin

At a horticultural trade fair in Germany the other week, one of the star attractions was a new rose variety designed to amaze. It wasn't that the blossoms were any more spectacular than any of the beautiful roses we are used to – the innovation in this case was that the stem was as straight as a poker and as tall as I am.

I watched as hordes gathered around it, photographed it and shared in on social media.

But for me it was a pointless oddity. I associate roses with beautiful old-fashioned gardens, with summertime, fragrance, pastel colours, Gertrude Jekyll and the Queen Mum. I don't need my roses messed with.

Imports of "perfect" red roses reach their peak on Valentine's Day.

The British climate is unsuited to growing roses in winter so these will be imported in their millions from equatorial countries such as Kenya, Ecuador, India and Colombia where they can grow all year round.

But you can't beat a garden rose for fragrance or character.

Britain has an unequalled tradition of rose growing with world-famous nurseries producing the finest varieties.

February is a good time to plant bare-root roses so you can be gathering beautiful bouquets from your own plot in the summer.

However, don't plant in frozen or waterlogged soil, so if the cold spell

Let your plot be kissed by a rose...

Peace roses

continues, hold off planting until March.

Add mycorrhizal fungi, such as Rootgrow, into the planting hole which will help establish friendly relations between the roots and soil.

One of the most intoxicating roses is Mme Isaac Pereire with her heavily perfumed raspberry pink petals – a lush heirloom Bourbon rose which forms a vigorous shrub or can be trained as a short climber.

If you need an enthusiastic Rambler to scramble up a tree, cover an ugly shed or garland a pergola, Paul's Himalayan Musk has dainty sprays of fragrant pale pink flowers and will tolerate more shade than most.

For a well-behaved climber, include cottage garden favourite Cecile Brunner, which has prolific sprays of dainty pink fragrant flowers and good disease resistance.

Just Joey is a classic 1970s hybrid apricot – fragrant, repeat flowering, and makes a gorgeous cut rose.

Another nostalgic favourite is Peace, with its generous yellow roses flushed with a delicate pink. It was developed by a French horticulturist before the Second World War.

Anticipating the invasion by Germany he sent cuttings of the rose to his friends in America, and after the fighting was over, it was

Broad beans can be sown in pots now

There's so much to be getting on with

■ Sow broad beans in pots indoors now for planting outdoors in March and April. A sunny windowsill that doesn't get too hot or cold, or a greenhouse is ideal for germination.

■ We're still in the bare root

JOBS FOR THE WEEK

planting season so now's the time to plant roses, trees and shrubs inexpensively.

■ Perennials and ornamental grasses that you left over for winter interest can now be cut back before new growth starts.

■ Apply a winter wash to fruit trees to get rid of overwintering eggs from any pests.

■ Mulch borders, especially if you've finished pruning shrubs.

Plant roses now

suppliers (see the list, left), choose disease-resistant varieties, and keep your plant in rude good health with good nutrition such as well-rotted farmyard manure. Simple home remedies of baking soda, soap and water sprays can also be effective against black spot.

SEE ORCHIDS BLOOM AT KEW

Plan your winter escape with a visit to Kew's 23rd annual Orchids Festival, where you can bask in the tropical paradise of the Princess of Wales Conservatory.

Immerse yourself in a celebration of Thailand's vibrant colours, culture, and magnificent plant life.

Enjoy beautiful floral displays, including a bright Vanda tunnel and arches decorated with orchids.

The festival is on now and runs until March 11.

Entry is included in the ticket price for the gardens - £16. See kew.org

PLANT OF THE WEEK

CROCUS TOMMASINIANUS

It was lovely to see early crocuses in bloom this week, their vivid purple blooms shivering in the snow.

Affectionately known as tommies, these are easy to grow bulbs which self-seed and freely naturalise. Plant in autumn a couple of inches deep in scattered drifts. If you are letting them spread in lawns, which looks delightful, don't mow the grass until their leaves are dying back. Native to the woodlands of south-eastern Europe, they will do best in sunshine, perhaps under deciduous trees. The main problem will be squirrels, who are partial to digging them up.

MORE THAN JUST BASIC ACCOMMODATION

The 1992 film Basic Instinct turned little-known actress Sharon Stone into a global celebrity almost overnight, partly for her acting skills but also for that infamous interview scene.

Basic Instinct made headlines for other reasons, too. The twisted story of a police detective played by Michael Douglas who has a torrid affair with the prime suspect of his own murder investigation - played by Stone - was criticised for its violence and graphic sex scenes.

Despite the disapproval, the film went on to be a commercial hit and raked in $352.9m in box office sales and won Academy and Golden Globe Award nominations.

The film was shot in California including at a beachside house on Spendthrift Road in Carmel-by-Sea, which is 120 miles down the coast from San Francisco.

The property was used to portray the home of Stone's character, Catherine Tramell.

The 12,000 sq ft residence has five bedrooms, nine bathrooms, 12 fireplaces and two kitchens plus two acres of lushly planted tropical gardens with pools, a spa, grotto and extraordinary views over the local coastline.

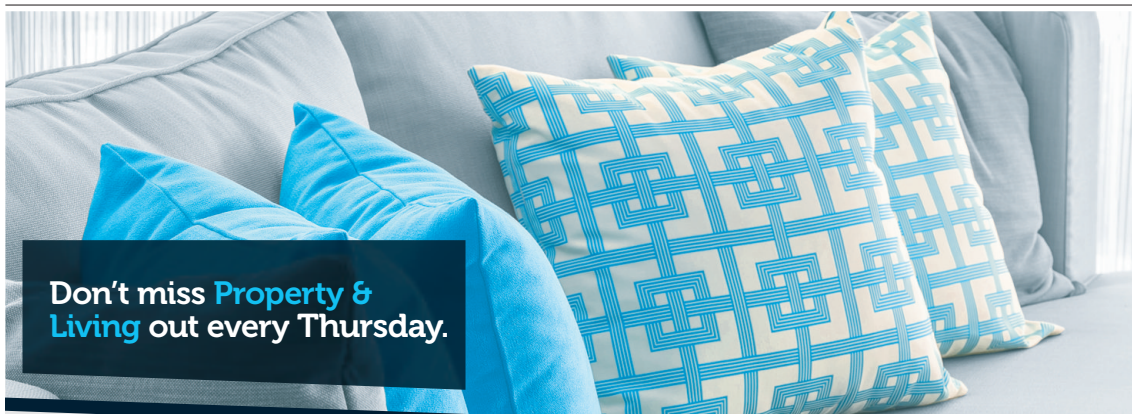

It is also the former home of doomed aviator, balloonist and adventurer Steve Fosssett, who disappeared in 2007 while flying his plane over a desert on the border of California and Nevada.

■ The listing agent is Tim Allen of Tim Allen Properties, Coldwell Banker in Carmel, California (+1 831 214 1990) or TopTenRealEstateDeals.com. It's for sale at $16.995 million.

Could you live in a house narrower than a train carriage? That's the question on the lips of anyone viewing this extraordinary house for sale, which measures just 7ft 7in wide.

It's known as a 'gap house' because the property was built in a passageway in between two shops. But, despite its tiny width, the three-storey property offers two reception rooms, a kitchen-diner, four bedrooms including a master with an en-suite, a family bathroom and a 48ft garden.

Known officially as The Slim House, the property has a steep sloping roof that swoops down from the front to the garden at the back. And its design is so unusual that TV presenter George Clarke featured it on his Channel 4 programme Amazing Spaces.

The property is in the Clapham area of SW London and was originally developed by a young first-time buyer couple who bought it for £430,000 before it was then sold to an advertising executive in 2014, who has now put it on the market for £1 million.

"Having been extended by its former owners, the property has been cleverly designed with well-placed storage and bespoke fittings to maximise the 1,058 square feet of living accommodation," says selling agent Jasper Colliver of Savills (0208 8774 811). But the property is not the slimmest in the UK.

According to the Guinness Book of Records, the narrowest in the world is a terraced house on the Scottish island of Great Cumbrae, which measures just 37inches wide at the front.

The Slim House even has a nice long garden to the rear

Playwright, journalist and wit Oscar Wilde is enjoying a revival at the moment, spearheaded by a season of his plays currently underway in London's West End.

Kicking off with a critically-acclaimed production of Lady Windermere's Fan starring Jennifer Saunders, and later to also feature his most famous play The Importance of Being Earnest, Wilde's satirical take on Victorian society is as fresh today as ever. Wilde, although married with a family home in London's Tite Street, lived a double life. A dutiful father and husband he was also the partying poster-boy of London's then louche and often homosexual world of bars, cabarets and illicit sex.

The area around Pont

His former apartment on Pont Street is now for sale. It's within a Dutch-style property built in 1876, and designed by CW Stephens, who also created the world-famous Harrods.

Wilde's old pied-a-terre includes an open-plan reception room, three bedrooms with en-suite bathrooms, its own lift, a dining hall, kitchen and a terrace.

■ It's on the market with agent JLL (020 7399 5010) for £4.95 million.

Many people's bookshelves groan with the works of Georgette Heyer who, until her death in 1974, was the queen of Regency and Georgian romance, a bustles and breeches genre of writing that she helped establish from the 1930s onwards

Along with many detective novels, favourites such as Friday's Girl and Devil's Cub have been translated into 10 languages. Some 100,000 of her books are still sold every year and more than 50 titles remain in print.

But the woman behind this literary success was extremely wary of publicity, and, when pinned down to comment, was often self-deprecating about her writing, once describing it as "nonsense". Despite this, in 2015 her witty style, attention to detail and historical research were celebrated when her childhood home was awarded a Blue Plaque from English Heritage.

It is claimed that the Queen is also a fan of her writing.

The semi-detached house at which the unveiling took place was the author's childhood home until she was four years old, and is at 103 Woodside in Wimbledon, South West London. The property is now for sale and includes five bedrooms, a large back garden and two reception rooms.

■ ESTATE agent Foxtons (020 8605 2900) says the property is ripe for refurbishment. It's for sale at £1.3 million.

A HOUSE THAT'S SPIC AND SPAN

There has been much debate in recent months about the need to build affordable homes to solve the UK's growing housing shortage as, year after year, we fail to build enough homes to meet demand.

But there was a time when a small band of entrepreneurs, visionaries and builders banded together after WWII to do just that and built thousands of stylish homes designed and built so that ordinary Britons could afford them. Called Span houses, they were the brainchild of Eric Lyons and Geoffrey Townsend, and examples of their developments can be seen all over the south of England.

They started building in earnest during the 1950s and their properties were radical for their time. Designed to be modernist but blend in with their suburban environments, Lyons and Townsend wanted to build affordable family homes with gardens for first-time buyers. The properties included modular designs, low-cost construction methods and required buyers to join a residents' association and get involved in maintaining the estates.

If you'd like a piece of this utopian world, then a four-bedroom example is currently for sale at Mallard Place in Twickenham, one of the last Span developments to be completed, in 1984.

■ This four-bedroom house overlooking the River Thames comes with its own boat mooring and is for sale via River Homes (020 8977 4500) for £1.35 million.

Want to serve up a stunning dinner? A new set of crockery and cutlery is sure to transform any dish

Tableware is set to be one of the stars of this year's interiors scene.

For years these staples – plates, bowls, knives and forks – have been pretty functional in their design. But right now they are set to come into their own with statement pieces that will add wow factor wherever they are placed – even when stowed away in your crockery cupboard or cutlery drawer.

So whether your dinner set is chipped beyond repair, your cutlery set is missing one all-important piece, or you simply want to treat yourself – and your dining table – to some new pieces, here is my guide to the current tableware trends.

UNIQUE UTENSILS

Each item of cutlery performs a very important function. Knives have to cut, forks need to stab and spoons need to scoop. Therefore, when it comes to the overall design, it's difficult to stray too far.

Handles, however, have always been a great way to add some personality to these functional pieces. And from vintage-inspired faux-bone pieces to decorative patterned sets, there is something to suit every taste and décor.

But handles aside, this year we are seeing a new trend emerging in the decorative cutlery stakes... colourful cutlery.

From around the 70s onwards, cutlery has largely been fashioned from stainless steel. And this is still very much the case. After all, it's relatively inexpensive, resistant to rust and withstands high temperatures (perfect for the dishwasher).

But this year we are seeing the emergence of coated stainless steel sets, which means cutlery is now available in rose gold, gold, black and even iridescent shades.

Matte finishes are also becoming increasingly popular as Scandi influences continue to shape our trends.

If cost is a consideration, and let's face it, when it is not, there are some fantastically priced sets on the market. But before you buy, remember this is an essential you will be using a few times a day, so no matter what you spent you are sure to be getting your money's worth.

DISHY DISHES

There has always been a wide choice of crockery on the market, but white has long been the dominant shade.

However, take a look around the homeware department of any major department store and you will be greeted by a plethora of hues – from the current interior staple of grey to Pantone Colour of the Year Ultra Violet.

Patterns are also big, from the traditional splash of colour around the edge to full-on flowers, stripes, gingham and motifs.

If you find the choice too overwhelming, don't be afraid to mix and match. Use your interior instincts to pick pieces that complement each other.

FEATURE FOCUS

WHEN it comes to storing crockery and cutlery, traditionally cupboards and drawers have been the answer.

But I think if you've spent a lot of money on new homewares, why wouldn't you want to show them off?

Invest in a glass vase or Kilner jar and place your new cutlery set inside. Put it on an ornate tray with a selection of cups and pop the whole thing on your dining table or kitchen worktop.

For crockery, a traditional dresser will give you plenty of display options, from the classic 'plates on edge' look to messy piles of colourful pieces.

TABLEWARE TIPS

■ Buy the best you can; it's tempting to scrimp but these items will be used multiple times a day
■ If you are a fan of the dishwasher, make sure your new pieces are all dishwasher safe

■ Don't hide them away; show them off
■ Buy a couple of spares in case of breakages
■ Don't be afraid to mix and match

Still leading the pack

It's clearly a testament to the overall quality design and packaging of the latest Ford Fiesta that it remains the UK's best selling new car even in the first month of 2018 where it easily outsold any other model finding 8,335 buyers in a market that was over six per cent down.

Now in its eighth generation the Fiesta is still ahead of the pack in the supermini sector – a position it's incredibly held for the past eight years – all down to Ford's backroom teams coming up with the right goods, at the right price and with shrewd marketing.

This latest range of Fiesta models is aimed at suiting supermini drivers with differing needs and budgets from the bargain basement of a £13,165 Style trimmed three-door right through to posher kitted out Vignale five-door tested here at an on-the-road price of £21,295.

Ford has always offered a slightly more up market version of the Fiesta ever since it was first launched back in the mid Seventies with the top model called the Ghia from collaboration with the Turin based styling studio of the same name arriving here in 1979.

Vignale is now that the luxury brand name – it's being used across other Ford model ranges too – and the obvious question for buyers is what do you get for paying out this extra money for a posher version?

Certainly the list of standard equipment on board over the next trim models down – the Titanium X and ST-Line – is impressive and includes riding on 17-inch 10-spoke alloy wheels with a Vignale front grille and body styling so it looks different from the others. Inside there's a distinct touch of more luxury and a bit of extra quality with again Vignale black ruby leather heated seats and steering wheel, rear view camera with parking sensors, partial leather heated seats, panoramic sunroof, Bang and Olufsen audio system plus several other minor extra luxury touches.

There's also a quality finish to the dashboard and rest of the interior plus a handy tablet sized Sync3 Ford touch screen which is so simple and easy to use.

The test car had Ford's award winning Ecoboost three-cylinder turbocharged petrol engine under the bonnet with 98bhp and a six-speed automatic gearbox – there are two more slightly powerful versions of the same engine at 123bhp and 138bhp but they are only available with a six-speed manual gearbox.

Years ago any small hatchback like the Fiesta with an automatic gearbox on board was pretty dreadful to drive because they were usually CVTs – belt-driven Continuously Variable Transmissions – which were cumbersome for the driver to use, lacked any form of decent acceleration and when revved hard made such a horrible noise.

Thankfully technology has moved on a pace and the six-speed automatic gearbox on this Fiesta Vignale is outstandingly good with such a smooth yet responsive action when accelerating hard and going up and down the gears again it does it so smoothly and quietly too.

It really is exceptional and without doubt the best automatic in any current supermini around.

Old CVT transmissions were also renowned for being thirsty on fuel too but the 98bhp in this Fiesta Vignale easily topped 49mpg, and just short of the official 54.3mpg combined cycle, over some 600 miles or so of varied driving routes.

For those drivers who want a bit more of a sporty response then simply push the gearlever down another notch into 'S' mode and there is a slight difference although for most drivers the normal 'D' mode will be more than adequate.

In terms of running costs this Fiesta Vignale is decent enough too with a CO2 of 118g/km and it sits in insurance group 10E and whilst outright performance of the 98bhp unit obviously can't match those of the two more powerful petrol versions it's no slouch either with a 0 to 62mph of around 12 seconds and a claimed top speed of 111mph.

As for driving in heavy city traffic and again out on the motorway acceleration was fine even though there is no manual gear change alternative on this automatic gearbox as you do get with other cars of this size.

This new Fiesta is 71mm longer, 13mm wider and sits 20mm lower than the outgoing model and has a slightly longer wheelbase with the benefit of all this coming in terms of more rear seat passenger legroom, one of the minor criticisms of the previous model.

This Fiesta has already won widespread industry praise for its excellent chassis and competent suspension set up providing good road holding and body control and it remains the most agile and driver-friendly supermini in the market place.

Boot space in the five door is 303 litres which expands to 984 litres with the rear seats folded and a welcome little plus for families in particular is that there's now a bigger, wider tailgate for more ease of loading.

As an alternative to the petrol powered Vignale model there is a five-door Vignale version with a 118bhp 1.5-litre turbo diesel engine and a six-speed manual gearbox (no automatic offered) which comes in at £21,675.

This one will appeal more to the big mileage company car driver particularly with its CO2 coming under the crucial 100g/km mark for tax purposes.

Across this whole new Fiesta range, including the Vignale tested here, the two most outstanding improvements in my view is the noticeable lack of road and wind noise out on the open road – they must now be the quietest of any current supermini – and inside it's far more comfortable both as a driver and passenger with better supported seats and a much nicer interior ambience than ever before.

The five-door Vignale is definitely the icing on the cake as we say and well worth the asking price and certainly worth the extra £650 over the equivalent three-door model.

The people listed are examples. Data Protection does not allow us to use actual people. Car Finance is not a lender. 3 minutes is the average time it takes to find out how much you can borrow when accepted. £500 minimum part exchange is against readily available list of cars. Does not apply to all stock. Nil deposit and 0% finance are normally Prime customers but on occasion Sub-Prime customers can apply. Every finance application is accepted as long as a driving licence can be proved. 95% of applications is our target to driving away. We offer same day drive away to all deals yet this can be delayed for numerous factors.

YOUR MEDIA CAREER STARTS HERE

DIGITAL ACCOUNT MANAGER

Salary: £Competitive Salary + Commission + Car + Bonus + Benefits Annual

Job Introduction
 With one of the fastest growing digital audiences in the UK, and a compelling range of multi-channel, digital marketing solutions now sitting proudly in our kitbag, we've got some truly outstanding opportunities for sales professionals who share our passion for digital marketing.

As demand for our services grows, we're looking for outstanding sales and account management talent to expand our team of digital sales consultants working across Cambridge to win new business and to develop mutually profitable marketing relationships. There is huge potential for success and career progression for the right candidates.

As a Digital Account Manager you will be responsible for understanding the needs and objectives of the businesses you will be contacting, and then providing the best digital marketing solutions to achieve and surpass them. Typically you will spend one day a week based in the office sourcing and engaging with local businesses, and you will be responsible for arranging your own sales visits.

About us
 Trinity Mirror Group is one of the largest national and regional multimedia content publisher in the UK, comprising national and regional news brands across the country.

We publish more than 150 newspaper titles across the UK & Ireland, from the national presence of the Daily Mirror, the Daily Record, the Sunday Mirror, the Sunday People and the Sunday Mail, to local favourites such as the Liverpool Echo, Welsh Daily Post and Chester Chronicle.

We have a network of more than 80 websites providing 24/7 coverage of the news, sport and showbiz stories that matter to more than 110m unique browsers every month via mobile, desktop, social and newspaper brands.

We are a dynamic and growing media business and are 'Everywhere, Every minute, Every day' and commercially provide creative, response driven marketing solutions to both local, national and international businesses.

Role Responsibility

- A high degree of focus and drive for new business acquisition, development and retention
- Building long term business relationships and networks
- Presenting and demonstrating the value of employing a multi-channel digital marketing strategy
- To constantly maintain excellent knowledge of online industry developments and innovation
- Achieving all required KPI and sales targets
- Lead sourcing/generating new business leads
- The Ideal Candidate
- Have strong desire to excel in a competitive sales environment
- Be highly motivated, driven and ambitious
- Be presentable, personable and professional in all aspects of your work
- Have experience dealing with business owners or Senior Directors of the organisations they serve
- Have a proven track record of sales success, with media sales experience being a distinct advantage
- Be able to demonstrate a clear understanding and passion towards the digital marketing landscape
- Have ability to articulate complex information in an easy to understand way
- Have ability to grasp new product commercial opportunities quickly

Package Description

- Generous bonus scheme
- Training and career development opportunities
- Company car
- Laptop and smartphone
- 33 days holiday per annum (including Bank holidays)
- A competitive pension along with an extensive flexible benefits portfolio
- Monday to Friday, 37.5 hours per week

Community Support Worker

£20,000-£24,000 | Permanent, Full Time | Essex

At Essex County Council (ECC) we're transforming our organisation to better serve the people of Essex and make sure the services we offer will continue to improve people's lives and expand their opportunities now and into the future. Nowhere is this truer than in Adult Social Care, which is why we are currently recruiting for Community Support Workers.

ECC is one of the largest councils in the country, at any one time Adult Social Care could be helping 17,000 people. At ECC we are embracing the transformation necessary to help as many adults as possible live the life they want. And that is central to our vision; providing solutions, not services, which help people live as healthily and independently for as long as possible. Four principles underpin this approach; prevention, early intervention and recovery, enablement and safeguarding. We're shifting our emphasis from ongoing support to prevention and early intervention and community support workers will be integral to delivering this approach.

As a support worker you will be working as part of a diverse team, working alongside social workers and occupational therapists as well as external partners, delivering bespoke, intervention work, in accordance with the care plan, to vulnerable adults.

We are looking for people passionate about care as you will be instrumental in enabling Essex County Council to focus on early intervention. We welcome applications from candidates with relevant experience of working with vulnerable adults, or educated to Level 3 Regulated Qualifications Framework (RQF). We are passionate about engaging with and providing support in the community, and at the core of this role will be working with our partners.

'We haven't been ruthless enough'

Hawks boss says side 'need wins' after draw with Hillians

By Kaylee Seckington
sportsdesk@hertsessexnews.co.uk

'WE NEED wins' was the message from manager Danny Chapman after his Harlow Town side failed to beat the Bostik League Premier Division's bottom club Burgess Hill Town on Saturday.

The Hawks took the lead at the Harlow Arena through a 12th minute Alex Read goal and looked to be heading for their second league win of 2018 until the Hillians equalised just two minutes from time.

It leaves Harlow just a point above Burgess Hill in the table, however, the Sussex side have two games in hand over Chapman's men.

And the Harlow boss admitted that not only was the manner of the draw very frustrating but his side could come to rue the two extra points they missed out on.

Finish

"We were in total control the whole game and we said at half-time that we needed to go and finish the job," Chapman explained. "We had opportunities to do so but we didn't do it and then in the last five minutes, because they are pushing to get something out of the game, we drop off, get deeper and get nervous then one ball down the side and the geezer has scored."

"Again it's that we haven't been ruthless enough when we have had chances to finish the game off."

"The positives is that it's a point and a half decent performance, but we need wins and there is no getting away from that fact. We need wins."

"Everyone around us got good results [on Saturday] and so we need to start picking up wins soon or we will find ourselves under that line."

Next up for Harlow is another struggling Sussex side - Worthing away on Saturday.

The Rebels sit 19th in the table but a win for Harlow on Saturday could narrow the gap between the sides to just two points.

"There's still 13 games to go, although a few teams around us might have a game in hand, so there's plenty of twists and turns in it yet," Chapman said of his side's battle against relegation.

"You can't affect other teams results unless you are playing against them so we can only concentrate on ourselves."

"The last three games have been better than before, but again we have come out with one point from a possible nine when we should have at least six. That's the problem at the moment."

"[Worthing] is going to be a difficult game because they are going well now and I don't expect them to be in or around it at all come the end of the season."

"So we are going to have to go there and gets the boys back in the right frame of mind to try to get something at Worthing."

Third place finishes for Harlow in home cross country race

HARLOW Running Club hosted the final race of the East Herts and West Essex Cross Country League on Sunday over a five mile course.

Final place booked with ease

HARLOW Rugby Club advanced to the final of the Essex Intermediate Cup with their 18-5 win over Wanstead.

After a disappointing start to the new year Harlow were determined to return to their attacking ways from the first half of the season and started well.

Wanstead conceded several penalties ten minutes into the game which allowed Danny Smith to kick at goal for 3-0.

After 26 minutes Harlow winger Will Grimley produced the move of the match, he caught a kick and made a solo run before sidestepping the Wanstead full-back to run in a try near the corner for Harlow to lead 8-0 at half-time.

After a penalty Harlow's full-back Ryan McGlone was then able to force his way over for their second try of the game.

With 20 minutes to go Wanstead were dealt a blow to their chances of making a comeback after receiving a red card for foul play, and were then shown a yellow card and had to see out the majority of the game with 13 men.

Grimley then ran in his second try of the afternoon for an 18-0 lead before Wanstead got on the scoreboard with a try in the corner.

The win takes Harlow through to the cup final against Romford on April 21 at Ilford Rugby club.
